PROTEST TO BLOCK REDFIELD'S VOTE WILL BE IGNORED

Insurance Probers Will Probably Ignore the Request of Attorneys for Companies.

The demand of the insurance companies that Congressman Redfield be wohibited from voting upon the report of the subcommittee of the House Dis- includes applications for seats in the trict Committee which has been conducting the insurance probe, probably will be disregarded by the investi- the peageant.

The committee has taken no formal action, but the complaint of the First National and Commercial companies. alleging that Mr. Redfield has been "a complaining witness, prosecutor and judge," is not expected to debar Mr. Redfield from the preparation of the report and from affixing his signature

Attorneys for the insurance com-panies appeared today to resume their defense of their clients, but the oral riguments went over until tomorrow.

Thairman Johnson announced that Congressman Prouty is ill and that Mr. Redfield has gone out of the city fo a short time, so Attorne, s Douglas and Carusi, for the insurance companies, and James Easby-Smith for the superintendent of insurance, packed up their documents and will come back tomorrow.

The first brief filed by the attorners is that offered today which contains a slap at Redfield, one of the members of the investigating committee. Other briefs, containing a digest of the testimony taken during the month of the examination will follow, but Attorneys Carusi and Douglas insist that Redfield should have no part in the investigation from this time on. from this time on.

Criticises Others. The brief directed at Redfield is also caustic in its criticism of Commissioner Judson and Edward J. Stellwagen. The record discloses," says the brief, "that this investigation was the perhaps unexpected outgrowth of a deliberate conspiracy to wreck the defendant nsurance companies by a campaign of publicity of such character that, without a trial or opportunity to be heard in their own behalf, their credit should be destroyed, their business ruined, and their competition removed." The brief alleges that Commissioner Judson was unable to get printed in Washington newspapers certain "libelous" charges made by the Commissioner at a board meeting, and that Redfield was then consulted with a view to get-ting publicity through his expressions on the floor of the House, or through esolution, demanding an investigation f the insurance companies. Elaborates On Charge.

Elaborating upon the charge that Redfield acted as prosecutor as well as judge during the pending inquiry, and that he has championed the cause of the "conspirators" against the compa-nies, the brief continues:
"Counsel respectfully submit that the antecedent connection of Mr. Redfield with the common purpose of Colonel Judson and Mr. Stellwagen is not within his privilege, other his privilege either as a member of Congress nor as a member of this com-mittee, and they, therefore, constitute a just ground for challenging his right to judgment upon the conduct of

"It is well within the possibilities that Mr. Redfield may be called upon to cast mittee shall find or not find, from the evidence adduced before it, some justification for the libelous attack which Colonel Judson and his associates at-tempted to publish through the columns of the local press, and which have con stituted the only formal charges and specifications of which these companies were ever apprised or against which they were called upon to defend them-selves. Under these circumstances, and without seeking to impugn in any way the purity of the motives which may have actuated Mr. Redfield in originally championing their cause, is not the impropriety of his sitting in judgment upon his own conduct too manifest to require further argument?"

Say He Showed Favoritism.

Attorneys for the insurance companies insist that Redfield, during the investigation, requested the calling of practically every witness who testified for the "prosecution," that he asked lead-ing and hypothetical questions to ex-tort from witnesses testimony damaging to the insurance companies.
In conclusion the brief, signed by Douglas and Carusi, says:
"Bo fully did Mr. Redfield assume the role of prosecutor, and with such zeal, that it was noticed and remarked by numerous witnesses, and in some cases even by members of the committee. even by members of the committee, notably Senator Gallinger, in the course of his testimony, referred to Mr. Redfield as the attorney for Colonel Judson (record, p. 448), and on the last day of the hearing Representative Berger, of the committee, assigned Mr. Redfield the role of Commonwealth's Attorney the role of Commonwealth's Attorney.

Cites An Example.

"For instance, how would it be possible for Mr. Redfield to give that weight to the testimony of Judge Gould to which 'n the mind of an impartial judge it might be entitled when Judge Gould's connection with this company was the subject matter of certain rep-resentations by Mr. Redfield to Mr. Henry of the Rules Committee and to the Speaker of the House, which, as Mr. Henry has testified, constituted one of the principal grounds upon which this investigation was ordered at all? "Under these circumstances, and, without in any way desiring to trespass upon Mr. Redfield's privilege as a mem-ber of the House of Representatives or of this committee; or to challenge his legal right to report to the aHouse of Representatives, whose agent he is for the purpose of an impartial investigation, that he has made good the charges for which he has stood sponsor, it is again submitted for Mr. Redfield's per-sonal consideration that every princi-ple of justice and fair play require his refusal to sit in judgment upon his own nandiwork."

The police today are trying to connect the remnants of the Bonnot gang, now on trial, with the murder of Edouard Peltier, formerly chief of the bureau of pardons of the ministry of justice, and a woman nurse, attendant upon him. Peltier's body and that of the nurse were found in the Peltier home. He had been strangled, and she hacked to death with an ax. About $1,000 had been stolen.

The police theory is that the murder was one of revenge, done by some uncaught member of the 'Demon Chauffeur' Bonnot's band. The nurse, it is believed, was an accomplice who let the murderer into the house, and he afterward killed her to make away with the only witness.

Although the geenral purpose of the measure and certain minor provisions were attacked, the opposition was centered on the illiteracy paragraph.

This provides that the alien must be able to read forty printed words in the language or dialect which he is accustomed to speak. It applies to all persons over sixteen years of age, unless the head of the family, having preceded his family to this country, has obtained his "first papera," in which event his family may enter without passing the test for illiteracy.

Benator Root, Cungressmen Sabath, Lobeck, Thayer, Gallagher, and Curley, and Secretary Hilles were present to hear the arguments.

A harge delegation from the Italian-American Pro-Immigration Society, of New York, was present, including John J. Franchi, C. Piva. J. N. Franchi,
